There is a very large disconnect between how primary care clinicians perceive their patients value them and their work and how major players in the healthcare system value them and their work.

Clinicians feel that hospital systems, health systems, and insurers don't value primary care (more than 30% each).

Over 70% of primary care clinicians feel valued by their patients.